Bobby Hull didn't bring pro hockey to Winnipeg, but he made it legitimate. It's now rather sad that when he returns to the city at age 73, he is virtually ignored by the pro hockey team that he legitimized.

Hull, the man who signed with Ben Hatskin at the corner of Portage and Main on June 27, 1972, made the fledgling Winnipeg Jets the talk of professional hockey.

But a couple of weeks ago, when he returned to Winnipeg to sign copies of his new book, The Golden Jet: A Spectacular Career in Stunning Photographs and help raise funds for the Amadeus Steen Foundation, he seemed hurt when he was asked about today's version of the team he helped create.

"I haven't been to a Jets game this season because they haven't invited me and we all know there aren't any tickets available," Hull said. "They (True North Sports and Entertainment, the Jets current owners) wouldn't even give me a meeting about a decade ago when I was involved with a group trying to set up the New WHA. Wouldn't even give me a chance to talk about it. They had no interest in our idea and it seems to me that I've been 'persona non grata' ever since.

Bobby wasn't happy, but it's hard to blame him. When former Jets are doing the radio post-game shows on two stations, when Teemu Selanne was treated like the second coming and Keith Tkachuk was invited to the opener, it's hard to imagine the Jets would ignore one of the club's true legends.

However, Scott Brown, the communications director of True North Sports and Entertainment sent the following email to the Winnipeg Free Press: "In general this season, we as an organization have been focused on the current Winnipeg Jets and getting the organization up and running. We fully intend to honor the team's history, which Bobby star in Chicago, a superstar in every sense of the word, and when he signed that contract with Jets owner and founder Ben Hatskin on June 27, 1972, Robert Marvin Hull changed hockey forever.

Nicknamed the Golden Jet by a Chicago sportswriter because of his long strides, blazing speed and flowing blonde hair, Bobby Hull was a magnificent leftwinger who professed to be a farmer at heart. He had been the greatest player in the history of the Chicago Blackhawks for 15 years when Hatskin decided that he was the one man who could give the Jets and the new, outlaw World Hockey Association, the credibility it needed.

In December of 1971, Hatskin called an accountant named Harvey Weinberg. He was Hull's business manager/agent. At the time, Hull was in the process of negotiating a new contract with the Hawks because he had no other choice. Due to the NHL's Draconian reserve clause, the Hawks owned Hull's rights until the day they wanted to forfeit them. It was a form a slavery on the rich and talented. Hatskin believed that if he offered the right amount of money, the 32-yearold Hull might consider leaving the NHL.

"I felt, overall, we'd get a good percentage of NHL players," Hatskin told the Winnipeg Tribune back in 1973. "But getting a superstar like Hull would mean instant-league in the minds of the public and the news media. Also it would cause other players to take the WHA seriously. There were only three or four superstars in hockey. All but Hull were tied up. He was our trump card. We went after him and we got him."

Hatskin went after him by telling Weinberg, "We'll pay him a million bucks." At first Hull and his agent thought it was nothing but talk, but as Hull became more frustrated with the Blackhawks, the offer started to have some serious merit.

In the meantime, no one in the Blackhawks organization believed for a minute that the Golden Jet would leave the NHL. For somewhere in the neighborhood of $250,000, paid over three seasons, Hull would sign with the Hawks. "Winnipeg didn't have a million bucks and the rest of the league wasn't really going to put up the money to give one team a superstar," so why worry. The Hawks believed all the talk was nothing more than a publicity gimmick.

Bobby Hull, cont'd

Finally, on a beautiful afternoon in early June, Hatskin returned to Winnipeg from a meeting in Denver with Hull and Weinberg. At the end of the session, Hull shook hands with the Winnipeg owner on a deal that would make the WHA a legitimate big time hockey league and would give Winnipeg the brightest star in its sporting history.

After the meeting, Hull told the Chicago Tribune, "If Winnipeg pays, I'm gone."

Back in Winnipeg, Hatskin called a news conference and with a battery of microphones under his nose, he told the world: "I'm 99.99 per cent sure that he'll sign. It looks good."

A few days later, Weinberg called Hatskin and hockey changed forever. Hull said Winnipeg accorded him the best of two worlds after he signed contracts worth $2.75 million that would cover the next 10 years of his life. Late that afternoon at Portage and Main, Hull signed a very public contract with the Jets. The size of the turn-out surprised Hull as traffic backed up for blocks on three sides of one of Canada's busiest intersections -- Portage and Main -- at the peak of the 5 o'clock rush hour. People stood on their parked cars to catch a glimpse of the Golden Jet.

"I was a little pessimistic how people would react toward me," Hull said last week. "People get- "I played here for the ting a lot of money better part of eight sometimes bring out the envy in others, but years, but it was the these people were people I've met, what great. 1965-66 season and years to lose a team it snapped Rocket and now, to get it Richard's 21-year-old back that makes this record of 50 goals. city very special." Hull, ultimately, scored 54 goals that season, then scored 58 goals in 1968-69.

The terms of what was considered to be the largest contract ever given to a North American professional athlete (at the time), read as follows:

pulted him through the minor hockey system and by age 16, he had signed what the NHL called, a "C-card" that made him property of the Chicago Blackhawks

He made his NHL debut in 1957-58 and finished his rookie season with 47 points and was runner-up to Frank Mahovlich as rookie of the year. Then, with the help of teammate Stan Mikita, he developed the curved hockey stick, led the Hawks to the 1961 Stanley Cup and in 1964-65, despite missing nine games due to injury, the Golden Jet scored 39 goals and helped Chicago reach the Stanley Cup finals, where they lost out to Montreal. At season's end he was awarded the Hart and Lady Byng trophies. The following season he set an NHL record with 54 goals and repeated as the Hart Trophy winner.

He was the best player in the game. In 1971-72, Hull hit the 50-goal mark for the fifth time and experts believed he was the playing the best hockey of his career, but amazingly, that would be the last time the NHL would see him for eight years.

The next summer, Hull signed with the Jets and played so brilliantly, he almost single-handedly made the WHA a legitimate contender to the NHL's throne as the best hockey league in the world. When Ulf Nilsson and Anders Hedberg came over from Europe, the Jets' "Hot Line" became the most exciting thing in the game. In 1974-75, Hull not only faced the Soviets in the second Canada-USSR series, he also went on to score 77 goals in the regular season to establish a new record for a major professional league.

How good was Hull? Well, in 1973 and 1975 he was chosen the WHA's MVP and in 1976, 1978 and 1979, he was an integral part of the Jets' three Avco Cup victories.

- 3. He received $1 million in cash from the World Hockey Properties Ltd., a branch of WHA owners who will find new, major endorsements for Hull whose share of all contracts will be 25 per cent.

It was a remarkable deal for the Jets and the WHA. The most well-known and probably, the best player at the time, had given the brand new league some much needed authenticity.

At the time, very few NHL players could hope to match Hull's physical gifts. Hull had speed, a monster slapshot and a powerful physique and he rode that combination to the top of the game in the 1960s.

He retired after that season with 610 goals in 1,063 regularseason games. Hull took his place in the Hockey Hall of Fame in 1983 along with old teammate Stan Mikita, with whom, he shares a statue at Chicago's United Centre.

These days Hull lives in Florida and travels the hockey world as an unofficial ambassador. He speaks at sportsman's dinners, promotes his books and memorabilia and meets with his old friends all over the hockey world.

"It's always great to come back to Winnipeg," Hull said. "I played here for the better part of eight years, but it was the people I've met, what Winnipeg represents to the game of hockey and how they've learned through the years to lose a team and now, to get it back that makes this city very special."

Fred Douglas Lodge hosts Police Academy for Older Adults

Thanks to the Police Academy 13-topic program held over 16 weeks at Fred Douglas Lodge on Burrows Avenue in Winnipeg, 103 seniors over the age of 55 are now educated on skills and safety principals which will empower them to protect themselves from being victims of fraud, identity theft, and elder abuse. Other topics included safe banking practices, internet safety, substances and gambling, home and fire safety, safe driving and scooter safety, information on wills, and much more.

The sessions were presented by Constable Trevor Zwarich, Age and Opportunity, Manitoba Addictions Foundation, Bardal Funeral Home, Winnipeg Fire and Paramedics, MPIC, and Kim Russell, Coordinator for Recreation at the Lodge. It was a fun way to learn about some not-so-fun situations a person can sometimes find themselves in. Kim Russell has been planning this since August of 2011. "It's a lot of work, March is Fraud Prevention Month: Recognize it, Report it, Stop it!

OTTAWA - March 1, 2012 - Fraudrelated offences are now thought to be as profitable as drug-related offences, estimated at between $10 and $30 billion annually in Canada by the RCMP's Commercial Crime Branch. The majority of these crimes aren't committed by kids at their computers, much of the work is conducted by criminal organizations.

Fraud should concern all Canadians because it de-stabilizes our national economy while strengthening organized crime groups. The impact on individuals, families and businesses is devastating: retirement savings, homes, businesses - and in some cases, lives have all been lost. The only good news is that the majority of frauds can be prevented by identifying the methods used by fraudsters. The more you know about a fraud, the less likely you are to become a victim of it. Fraud Prevention Month is an annual event that gives private and public organizations involved in the fight against fraud an opportunity to further raise public awareness. "While the spotlight is on fraud during the month of March, it's important to be vigilant about it all year long. Being cautious isn't something to be ashamed of. Whether you're shielding your PIN number from view or asking questions of telemarketers, don't be afraid of offending people who are asking for your money," says RCMP Superintendent Steve Foster, Director of the RCMP Commercial Crime Branch.

"Organized crime presents a serious threat to Canadian communities and is linked to a wide range of criminal activity, including fraud," said Public Safety Minister, Vic Toews. "Public awareness is critical to fighting fraud and our Government is committed to the development of initiatives that help inform Canadians on how to protect themselves and their families from fraudrelated crimes." Over the next four weeks, the RCMP will be participating in a series of local and national fraud-awareness initiatives.

To help reduce your chances of being victimized by fraud, check the RCMP's website daily during the month of March for tips aimed at keeping you safe from scammers. Topics covered will include identity theft, phishing, online shopping, social networking and credit and debit card fraud.

The Thistle band recorded live by (Richard Malo) MALO Recording Studio downstairs at the Marlborough Hotel on Smith Street in downtown Winnipeg on Saturday, February 18. L-R: Dennis Drabyk, Jerry Tretiak, Chris Gillis and John Cartwright.

Do you remember way back, when...

The Pig and Whistle was a Canadian musical television series aired on the CTV television network from 1967-77. It was set in a fictional English pub and featured music of the Carlton Showband, a Canadian-Irish musical group, and various other Canadian, British and Irish entertainers. It was one of CTV's most popular programs of its day.

Well, John Cartwright of Inwood, Manitoba, along with three friends-Jerry Tretiak, Chris Gillis and Dennis Drabykput together a band named Thistle, and brought back the traditional English pub style show 'Pig and Whistle,' but called it the 'Pig and Thistle' show.

Don't let the band name fool you An evening with Thistle won't hurt a bit. Unless you split a gut with their standup comedic humour.

Thistle will have you singing along, clapping your hands and tapping your toes to the familiar tunes of 'Wasn't That a Party' or traditional Canadian, and some of North American, folk song favourites.

It doesn't stop there. With their fourpart vocal abilities, multi-instrumentalist skills, and diverse knowledge of many musical genres, they are sure to please any crowd. They can go from the serene sounds of Danny Boy to the sounds of contemporary artists such as Gordon Lightfoot and Simon & Garfunkel, and yet to the country sounds of lan Tyson and John Denver in a matter of moments.

Thistle first performed a 10-week stint at the Fox and Hounds Tavern at the St James Hotel in Winnipeg in latter 2011 and has since been asked to return time-and-time again. Now they are performing at various venues throughout Winnipeg and even rural Manitoba. They have even been invited to England for two weeks and to the Silver Fox Yacht Club in P.E.I.

Their music is real - no musical enhancements, whatsoever. They complete the ensemble with similar stage attire. "We perform for the public eye, not only the public ear," says John Cartwright.

Alzheimer's Society Manitoba Dealing with Dementia -How Caregivers Can Cope

by Garrick Kozier

Barbara Froese, a long-term care nurse in Winnipeg with over 30 years of experience, has seen it all. Alzheimer's disease, however, hits close to home.

"My mom has had Alzheimer's now for close to ten years," said Froese on Monday during a break at the Alzheimer Society Dementia Care 2012 Conference at the Canad Inns Polo Park. "It's something I've accepted, but it's not always that easy."

The hardest part for Froese is knowing her mother is no longer the person she once was. "She's gone. Completely gone. You breathe in bits and pieces of her, but the only thing left is her body," said Froese. "That's the hard part."

It's stories like this that brought over 600 people together under one roof for the two-day conference.

This is the tenth year the Alzheimer Society has hosted the event, which aims to provide information, insight and encouragement for health care professionals who work with people living with dementia.

Minister of Healthy Living, Seniors and Consumer Affairs, Jim Rondeau, opened the proceedings by thanking all the health care professionals and front-line workers for all they do.

"We can put policy after policy in place, but all the work and care begins with you," said Rondeau to the capacity crowd. "We need to bring more support to the people and families who have loved ones with dementia."

Guest speakers included Dr. Fran Racher, Dr. Adrian Wagg, Dr. Howard Feldman, and Dr. Arthur Schafer, director of the Centre of Professional and Applied Ethics at the University of Manitoba.

Dr. Schafer, who, at age 70 still rides his bicycle to work every day, and has done so for the last 40 years, spoke on, amongst other topics, the importance of realistic approaches to improving the livelihood of those with end stage dementia. Too often, according to Dr. Schafer, the primary focus is on prolonging life. With end stage dementia, there isn't an on and off switch. The damage to the brain is irreversible. Coupled with the normal break down of the body through the life cycle, he feels it's no way for someone to live their final years.

"What's the point? Someone with dementia living in a vegetative state has no chance of regaining any of their lost brain capacity. It's important to look at the situation logically and to strive at improving the person's quality of life. That means spending time with them, laughing with them, and allowing them to enjoy life," said Dr. Schafer.

Dr. Schafer also warned about the pitfalls of early detection. He said the formation of amyloid plaques and neurofibrillary tangles, which are strongly believed to contribute to the degradation of brain cells, aren't always tell-tale pre cursors for dementia.

"Some people develop those protein plaques and tangles and show no signs of dementia. And there's some who've developed dementia yet have no trace of these tangles in their brain tissue."

Alzheimer Society of Manitoba CEO Sylvia Rothney agreed that while there isn't a miracle drug to cure Alzheimer's, early detection is key in the fight against the disease.

"We push for early detection because of the chance to provide supportive counseling and education," said Rothney.

In between speeches, attendees were invited to separate learning sessions. Topics ranging from care for elderly couples to recreation studies were offered. Alzheimer Society Education Coordinator Jennifer Vicente-Licardo said that these types of sessions are the true strength of the conference.

"With so many different aspects in health care, there's really something for everyone."

The Long Term and Continuing Care Association of Manitoba provides valuable services to seniors, welcomes new members

Seniors make up the fastest-growing age group. This trend is expected to continue for the next several decades due mainly to a decreased fertility rate (i.e. number of children by woman), an increase in life expectancy, and the effects of the baby boom. In 2010, an estimated 4.8 million Canadians were 65 years of age or older, a number that is expected to double in the next 25 years to reach 10.4 million seniors by 2036. By 2051, about one in four Canadians is expected to be 65 or over. (Source Statistics Canada)

By, Colleen Swifte

The Long Term and Continuing Care Association of Manitoba (LTCAM) is a non-profit organization that incorporated in 1959 and was created by a group of visionary nursing home operators who got together to see what they could do to provide better services for seniors. "Back in 1959 personal care homes, as they are now known, were not an insured service and there weren't very many residences. They advocated to raise awareness for the needs for seniors' care and services", says LTCAM Executive Director, Jan Legeros. "They also got together to talk about standards of care and quality indicators. They set up review teams who went to each other's nursing homes and benefited from each other's feedback. It was really way before its time." It wasn't until 1973 that personal care homes became an insured service covered by Manitoba Health. In 2004, Manitoba conducted the first Provincial Standards review. This now provides a more consistent approach to ensuring quality care.

LTCAM is a member driven association that has about 80 members at present. Legeros says, "We advocate on behalf of seniors and the staff at the residences who serve them. We also cut through the confusion and red tape involved in finding quality services for seniors and information for the public. Our members make it possible for us to do what we do." LTCAM members are retirement residences, supportive housing residences, and personal care homes as well as a number of commercial/affiliate members such as home care agencies and other specialized, related services. "We advocate, partner and communicate with government and the regional health authorities to make sure quality is as high as it can be. We also advocate for affordability and access to services, as some options are not covered by Manitoba Health. While there are a set number of subsidies and supplements available, we think there should be more; especially for couples seeking services and care. We promote and encourage more public information and education, not only for seniors but also for their caregivers and families, including financial information. When you plan for retirement you should think about the possible extra costs that may come along as you transition into using services. If you educate yourself about the options, then at least you have done some preplanning."

Back in 2006 when Legeros starting working for LTCAM, she said she realized there was no one website a person could go to and get all the information they needed. The LTCAM staff, consisting of Jan and Suzanne Verstraete, have now revamped their website into a onestop shop for information and made it as user-friendly as possible for ease of navigation. For example, by using the interactive provincial map, you can focus on the area of the province where you live and check out the member residences in that area. They have created a question and answer sheet for prospective residents or their caregivers to use when they speak with staff at seniors' residences. The website is also available in French. For people who may not be able to access the website, LTCAM will assist by phone.

Legeros says, "We want to get this information out to the general public, rural areas and to potential new members, whom we welcome." Members find our communication, information and networking services invaluable. In a recent survey members described us as the "main repository for information". Our membership in the Canadian Alliance for Long Term Care ensures our members are also up to date on national issues across the country. To learn more about the LTCAM visit our website www.ltcam.mb.ca, where you will find a short video called "Who We Are".

LTCAM Executive Director Jan Legeros also chairs the Age-Friendly Committee for the Village of Dunnottar in rural Manitoba.

A&O Celebrates 55 Years of Serving Older Adults

A&O: Support Services for Older Adults (formerly Age & Opportunity) would like to invite you to join us in one of the many celebrations we will be hosting this year that will celebrate 55 years of providing innovative programs to older Manitobans. This year the agency is undergoing many changes from a new logo and tagline and a new updated website which will be launched sometime around June 2012.

A&O is also trying a new fundraising venture with Collette Vacations and Fehr Way tours where 10 seats are being held in our name which older adults 55+ can acquire by mentioning A&O: Support Services for Older Adults. Until March 19 there is a $200 discount on the cost of the package and there will also be a webinar that will answer your questions on the trip to Italy called Italian Vistas. This specially selected trip will offer travelers 13 days with 18 meals, regional wine, with included dinners, a visit to a Tuscan Winery, Classical Rome tour, services of a professional tour manager, baggage handling from hotel to hotel and much more. Travelers can also choose from options such as a Gondola cruise in Venice, the Vatican Museums and St. Peter's Basilica. Rome by Night and several other special offers as part of this tour package, for very affordable rates. This trip departs on September 17 and returns September 29, 2012. On March 12 there will be a webinar that interested travelers can learn more about this trip from Ashley Van Eslander, the representative who works with Collette Tours. Collette Tours provides the very knowledgeable tour guides and has a fine reputation of providing guided tours for many years. Fehr Way is the travel agency who provides the transportation portion of the trip. A&O receives only a portion of the seat sales which will help to support funding for our programs and services.

Did you know ... that you can tour different countries, learn new languages and even join a book club - all over the phone? A&O's Senior Centre Without Walls offers a wide variety of educational and recreational programming that Manitobans 55+ can enjoy from the comfort of their own home. The program is offered free of charge and participants call into a toll-free number and follow along with the materials that have been mailed out. If you are unable to call into the line, we can call you and have you join us. In addition, all of our books and short stories are read aloud. We will be offering over 30 different programs in our April - June term including a Cinco de Mayo Fiesta, Celebrity Bingo, historical tours of Winnipeg, and presentations on how to talk to your doctor, nutrition, spirituality and astronomy. To receive a guide please call us toll-free at 1-888-333-3121.

A&O will be hosting the 5th Annual Seniors Housing & Lifestyles Expo which will be held on Friday, May 4, 2012 from 10 AM to 3 PM. This year we are waiving the admission fee as part of our celebrations and encourage all to come out and meet our exhibitors, as well as plan to attend a few presentations. There will be many prizes and entertainment at this free event and food will be available for purchase on site.

We also invite our members and their friends to join us for our annual BBQ to be held on Friday, September 21, 2012 at the Isaac Brock Community Centre. There will be live entertainment, fun indoor and outdoor activities and food catered by a local well respected catering firm.

For more information on these and other programs please visit our website at www.ageopportunity or call 956-6440. ■

More Than Medications Pharmacists are the number one The MSP urges you to take the time

trusted health-care professional in Canada, says a recent Ipsos Reid poll. The Manitoba Society of Pharmacists (MSP) is proud to play this role. In fact, the theme for this year's Pharmacy Awareness Week, which runs March 4 to 10, is Talk to Your Pharmacist: A Healthy Choice.

"The role of a pharmacist has evolved beyond the procurement and dispensing of medications and as health care demands and our practice evolves, pharmacists are the most accessible health care provider," says MSP President Mel Baxter.

Ask someone to describe a day in the life of a pharmacist, and he or she will probably paint a portrait of someone in a white lab coat dispensing medications. While this is a component of the job, pharmacists play a much larger role in the maintenance of a patient's health and well-being.

"We really have evolved from a product-centred practice to patientcentred practice."

~ MSP President Mel Baxter

"We really have evolved from a product-centred practice to patient-centred practice," says Baxter.

Pharmacists can help patients manage acute and chronic conditions and side effects from medications. They are also a great source of information and guidance for issues such as weight loss, nutrition, disease prevention and smoking cessation.

Education, health promotion, and monitoring safe and effective medication usage are all part of a pharmacist's day. The MSP hopes to see an expansion of the pharmacist's role in Manitoba, including injections, treatment of minor conditions and prescription adaptation. The MSP urges you to take the time to learn about public services provided by your pharmacist. In particular, the Manitoba Medications Return Program allows you to discard expired or unused medications in a safe, convenient way. Storing medicine in your home is a potential risk for children and teens. Flushing medicines down the toilet or throwing them in the garbage is an environmental hazard. Instead, return medication to a participating pharmacy. Talk to your local pharmacist about this free service or visit www.medicationsreturn.ca.

It's Safe to Ask is another public service available to patients and caregivers, in the hopes of increasing communication, empowerment and positive health outcomes. In particular, this program suggests you ask three important questions of your pharmacist and health care provider: What is my health problem? What do I need to do? Why do I need to do this? Learn more at www.mbips.ca/wp

The MSP will host more than 50 events around the province at pharmacies, shopping malls, hospitals and assisted living centres during Pharmacy Awareness Week. Talk to your pharmacist! It's a healthy choice. Visit www.msp.mb.ca for more information. ■

Our Members represent seniors' residences, supplies and services available throughout Manitoba. They support the Long Term & Continuing Care Association of Manitoba's (LTCAM) advocacy efforts on behalf of Manitoba seniors and the staff who serve them. Our members make all the work of LTCAM possible. Just one example of this, is this new 'Where Do I Start?' navigation tool. We, in turn, recognize their support on our website, on LTCAM Committees, and in our advocacy activities and communications. There are many Residences, Resource Centres, Associations, Organizations, and companies who offer services, with and without care. Therefore, in addition to spending time on our website we encourage you to consult our "More Resources" section, your local phone directory and browse the internet when seeking the options available in your area. 🔳

Preparing for the migrating birds' return

Eastern Bluebirg

By Jennifer Gobeil (See our ad on front page of this issue of Senior Scope)

During the spring, hundreds of wild bird species return from their tropical, wintering grounds to nest and raise their young. This massive migration brings the greatest opportunity of any season to attract birds by providing nesting materials and safelylocated nesting boxes. With birds expending so much energy migrating, courting and looking for food, these helpful additions will make their lives a little easier.

Since few hollow trees remain in cities and suburban yards, manmade nesting boxes have been credited with helping to increase the previously declining populations of cavity-dwelling wild birds, such as bluebirds. Bluebird enthusiasts across the continent have created miles of bluebird trails, which consist of bluebird nesting boxes placed at appropriate intervals.

A bird's primary consideration when choosing a nesting site is security. Protection from predators and proximity to food is of vital importance to the success of a bird's offspring.

There are many different styles of nesting boxes available, including those that are decorative and bird-specific. Before purchasing a nesting box, one should be sure that it meets these six requirements:

1) Designed for the species, according to bird's size and nesting requirements.

2) Ventilation holes to provide a release for heat build-up.

3) Easily cleaned.

4) Easily mounted or hung. 5) Durable to withstand several seasons of use. 6) Drainage holes in the bottom of the house.

It is entertaining and educational to watch birds as they go through the many stages of their lives, including choosing a nest site, making the nest, laying eggs, feeding their hatchlings, and then, watching the fledglings as they venture out on their own.

For more information on nesting and to find a variety of nesting boxes, visit Wild Birds Unlimited, located in Winnipeg. Wild Birds Unlimited is part of the original and largest franchise system of backyard bird feeding and nature specialty stores with more than 275 locations throughout the United States and Canada. Wild Birds Unlimited specializes in bringing people and nature together with their bird feeding and nature products, their expert advice and educational events. # Memorable Pets for Alzheimer's Patients

In Lexington, KY, sisters Bettina Dickson Rusher and Frances Dickson, started a new company, Memorable Pets, and has released a line of plush stuffed dogs and cats to bring joy to dementia and Alzheimer's patients and to serve as a connection point for family members. The sisters came to fruition after their mother began her battle with Alzheimer's. "Our mother had a real cat which she loved, but once the Alzheimer's set in she was unable to care for it properly, so we bought her a stuffed cat to keep her company. We were amazed at the joy the cat brought her," Rusher said. "Before we knew it we were producing animals and handing them out to other patients on her floor," she adds.

Functional MRIs of people with Alzheimer's show that the emotional centers of the brain stay very active long after the language, memory and cognitive centers decline.

"Several studies have shown that interactions with a stuffed animal increase happiness and provide a > calming effect. They're also a great way to allow patients, who often have to rely on everyone else for care, to be able to care for something themselves," Dickson said.

The company's goal is to gain nonprofit status for their Pets to People program. For more info or to order a Memorable Pet ($29 retail including shipping), visit www.memorablepets.com.

Canadian Cancer Society - Daffodil Days

This March, hundreds of volunteers will be fanning out across the province to sell 50,000 bunches of daffodils to raise money in the fight against cancer. Daffodil Days is one of the Canadian Cancer Society's longest running fundraising events, dating back to 1954 when daffodils were used to decorate tables at a fundraising tea held by Lady Eaton at the Eaton's store in downtown Toronto.

From March16-24, Canadian Cancer Society volunteers will be selling daffodil bunches for $6 each in major malls, clinics, hospitals, retirement residences, and Walmart locations throughout Manitoba.

The Canadian Cancer Society hopes to raise over $250,000 again this year. Proceeds are used to fund cancer research, prevention strategies and community services.

"Cancer is a disease that affects virtually every Manitoban," says Heidi Struck, Daffodil Days campaign manager at the Canadian Cancer Society. "Whether you are a friend, family member, co-worker, or are battling the disease yourself, we have all been touched by cancer."

The daffodil is the Canadian Cancer Society's symbol of hope in the fight against cancer. In addition to the live daffodil sales, the Society is again encouraging all Manitobans to wear a daffodil pin throughout Daffodil Month (April). The pins are worn to show people facing cancer that they are not alone, and to remember loved ones lost to cancer. The pins are available everywhere the live flowers are sold this April, including all TD Canada Trust outlets.

Where There's Humour, There's Always Hope - PART TWO

by William J. Thomas - Humour Columnist

I do believe that equation, where laughter lingers, promise resides.

The revised edition of Margaret And Me carried that title Where There's Humour, There's Always Hope and it highlighted humorous stories from the nursing home where my mother spent the last two years of her life. In a place where overworked staff take care of aging and often confused residents, humour is the common denominator that keeps everyone upbeat and functioning.

In her prime my mother ran a small boarding house in Schumacher for Irish immigrants who had come to work in the gold mines of Timmins, Ontario. My mother came from a burly bunch of immigrant Irish miners - first lead in Colorado, then coal in Sydney, Nova Scotia and finally the McIntyre and Hollinger gold mines of the north.

She drifted back there occasionally through the fog of dementia in her last years. I'd go to visit her at Northland Manor and she'd be sitting off to the side scowling as forty fellow residents enjoyed lunch in the dining room.

"I don't want to talk about it."

"Well, we gotta talk about it, what's the matter?"

"What's the matter? You try making lunch for this bunch." she said pointing at the diners. Then she looked at me, shook her head and said: "There must be forty of 'em and they all showed up at the same dang time!"

A king is looking to recruit brave knights so he offered half his kingdom, 2000 kilos of gold, or his daughter's hand in marriage to any brave man who could cross a river full

In her slightly warped time machine, a busload of seniors showed up at Margaret's house back in Schumacher.

I did attend the Alzheimer meetings in which they encourage you to go with the flow. Wherever Margaret's mind wandered I was supposed to follow. I just could not do that. I was always trying to bring her back to reality and real time.

Like the day I was warned upon entering Northland Manor that I had a real problem - "Your mother found her mother this morning at breakfast."

It was late afternoon and my mother Margaret was still in her bathrobe and slippers. She had been searching the nursing home all day for Nanny. She was inconsolable.

We sat out in the garden on a park bench and I opened two cans of cold beer from the little cooler I'd brought.

"I hate to be the bearer of bad news. Marg, but Nanny passed away a long time ago."

"Oh, don't be silly, Bill. She's here. I saw her."

"No, I hate to put it this way but -Nanny is deceased."

My mother shook her head defiantly. "Okay, let's try logic. Just for the sake of argument Marg, how old are you?" 'I have no idea." my mother shrugged.

"Well you're 92 years old."

"Gee," she said, giving me the thumbs up, "that's good."

"Oh yeah, that's good. Now if ... if Nanny was still alive how old would she be?'

"My mother shook her head, "I have no idea."

"Well, Nanny would be like 131 years old."

"Gee, that's really good!" my mother said giving me two thumbs up.

"No, no, no, Marg. You're missing the point. Nanny died about 40 years ago. Sorry Marg, but Nanny is dead."

To which my mother got this big smile on her face, looked down at her slippers and then up at me and said: "Well Bill, that's going to come as a big surprise to her because this morning ... she was just as peppy as she could be!"

I hung my head and then took a swig of beer.

"Okay Marg, drink up and let's go look for Nanny."

When Margaret And Me was published I did a reading at the Roselawn Theatre in Port Colborne and 300 kind people showed up as well as Margaret. Monica Rose, Margaret's friend and caregiver, kept Margaret backstage and just out of earshot because even at the age of 92 she could still get a lawyer.

Later upstairs in the signing lounge Margaret sat next to me looking both surprised and proud as I autographed books for the subscribers of the reading series.

Coming from a family of men who muscled gold out of the ground to survive, my mother never understood how her son could stay at home and make a good living from making fun of his dog. But somehow she understood, tonight was special.

And then somebody in line asked my mother to autograph a book and my radar went through the roof. I didn't think she could do it.

Pressing hard on the pen with her arthritic fingers, my mother managed to script her full name - Margaret Mary McLean Thomas. The pride that welled up in both of us will be with me to the end.

And then the next person requested her autograph and the next person and pretty soon Margaret's signature was getting bigger and bolder than my signature and then we got into a fight about who wrote the damn book anyway.

There was a very telling moment when Alex MacBeath, the sponsor of the author series, came over and asked my mother if she wanted another beer.

"Hell yes," she said. "this is hard work."

So although my mother never quite understood what I did for a living, she knew it wasn't easy.

Funny, impish, eyes sparkling with pride over a pint of ale - Margaret Mary McLean Thomas – Irish to the very end.

"No your majesty," replied the man. "Then, my daughter's hand in marriage?" the king inquired.

"No your majesty," the man repeated. "Then what is it that you want?"

The man replied, "The name of the person who pushed me in the river."

Laugh a Little No one volunteered. Finally a brave young man jumped into the river without hesitation and crossed it without any difficulty.

> The king asked, "What do you want brave man, half of my kingdom?'

The man said, "No your majesty." "Then the gold?" the king asked.

Marty's still here!

32 years ...... 32 years ! Marty Halprin has been in the jewellery business for 32 years.. starting out small in the old downtown , when downtown was a downtown .... to buying his own building on Osborne and Gertrude to house Celia's Jewellery. Celia's looked after Winnipegers for all their jewellery needs... diamond rings for young couples..... anniversary rings for "old " couples...... custom designs for those who couldn't find what they wanted...... and jewellery repairs for those worn-out or damaged items.

Celia's Jewellery was known as the go-to store if nobody else could fix it..... the go-to store for the impossible-to-find matching stone in a ring or pendant.

Marty would always find a way to fix the impossible-to-fix. He always found a way to make his customers and many friends happy.

After 32 years you collect a lot of stuff - so, in the fall of 2010 Celia's Jewellery had a closing-out sale to end all sales. There were line-ups to get into the store.

Marty was going to try to retire and do something as silly as become a bike courier. Well, that didn't happen. Instead , he downsized the store, got rid of all the "chazerai" in the sale, and rented out the other half.

So , as the story goes ...... Marty is still in business ....on his own... and doing what he does best, now under the name "MARTY'S DIAMOND AND GOLD EXCHANGE"...... still with the same dedicated award-winning goldsmith, SOUK ...and Jack (Jane?) of all trades, ANNE.

Marty's buys and sells estate jewellery, scrap gold, diamonds and coins. Marty's still custom makes any precious item in gold or silver and, of course, provides expert jewellery repairs. Again, for all your diamond or gold jewellery needs . ..... see Marty - but not on Tuesday or Wednesday mornings as he's gone bike riding. Open 10 to 5:30, Sat., noon to 5.
